

Michigan

Although Michigan's afterschool program participation has increased over the past 10 years, the state continues to fall further behind the national average. In 2004 and 2009, Michigan was three percentage points behind the national average; in 2014, with afterschool program participation at 13 percent, it falls 5 percentage points behind the national average. Meanwhile, unmet demand for afterschool programs in Michigan continues to rise, increasing from 27 percent in 2004 to 35 percent in 2009 to 44 percent in 2014.
