

Virginia

After jumping ahead of the national afterschool program participation rate in 2009, Virginia lost ground in 2014 as afterschool program participation decreased from 16 percent to 15 percent. The average time Virginia children spend in an afterschool program also dropped slightly below the national average, from 8 hours per week in 2009 to 7.31 hours in 2014. And, while Virginia's parent satisfaction with their child's afterschool program remains high at 87 percent, it dropped slightly from 92 percent in 2009.
