

Minnesota

Minnesota's afterschool program participation rate has continued to climb over the past decade, growing from 8 percent in 2004 to 12 percent in 2009 to 15 percent in 2014. Additionally, the percentage of Minnesota children alone and unsupervised after school has decreased over the years, dropping from 35 percent in 2004 to 25 percent in 2014. Although Minnesota's afterschool program participation is below the national average, parents who are able to take advantage of the programs are satisfied. Ninety-four percent of Minnesota parents report that they are satisfied with their child's afterschool program's variety of activities and 92 percent report that they are satisfied with the quality of care—both above the national average.
